

Kate Hollimon

Pointing Women to the Wonder of His Word.

Official Bio or Suggested Introduction for Events

Kate Hollimon loves teaching God's Word. She delights in helping women grasp and understand the truths of scripture through her clear and practical teaching. In her messages, Kate helps women:

- Revel in hope and healing by understanding and embracing the power of scripture.
- Grab hold of comfort and peace in a world of weariness.
- Stop striving for approval and awaken to a life of fulfillment.
- Throw off others' expectations and live a life held captive by grace.
- Shatter the mirage of "I've got it all together" and replace it with a life of abandon.

Through earning her Masters in education and six years spent working and teaching in a university setting, Kate learned effective techniques for teaching adults and being an impactful communicator. However, she has found the greatest delight in teaching God's word to women in her local church through Bible studies as well as sitting on the teaching team for the Young Married Connect Group with her husband.

Sitting on her church's Women's Ministry Leadership Team for several years has allowed Kate to serve in many different capacities. At different times, Kate chaired the Woman-to-Woman Mentoring program, oversaw the women's bible studies at her church and planned various ministry events. These opportunities gave her an in-depth glimpse into the hearts of the women she longs to serve.

Kate is married to the love of her life, Matthew, and together they have two young kiddos – a boy and a girl – and a Golden Retriever named Norman. Kate has a healthy love for cheese, an unhealthy love of college football and has very little fashion sense (which would explain the excessive amount of hooded sweatshirts she owns)!
